Twalker St., Baltimore, Dec. 1851.
For six years I have been a great sufferer from Blood Disease, Dyspepsia, and Constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact, life had almost become a burden. Finally, when hope had almost left me, my husband seeing Beowy's Iron Bitters advertised in the paper, induced me to give it a trial. I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at the present time.

Fast American Sailing Ships

In about the year 1844 began the most important era in the history of American shipbuilding. Our Liverpool packets had already demonstrated the capabilities of our builders and mariners. The clipper ship Canada, for example, under the command of captain Macy, made her trips almost with the regularity of a steamer. From fourteen to sixteen days was the average length of her voyages between the two ports. This may have been an extreme case perhaps, but the fact remains that these liners made a remarkable record. Without discussing the question concerning the respective merits of our clipper and foreign ships, it is not too strong a statement to say that for the period of perhaps fifteen years, during which our vessels circled the globe in their voyages and spread their vast expanse of canvas in every sea, the runs made by American ships have never been surpassed by sail, and rarely equalied by steam. Donald McKay about the year 1844, commenced to win his world wide reputation for building clipper ships of a size and speed hitherto unequaled. The clipper ship James Baines, built by Mc-Kay, ran 420 miles in 24 hours. The Red Jacket, built by Deacon Thomas, at Rockland, Me., in 1853, became celebrated after her first trip, when she made the remarkable run from New York to Liverpool in thirteen days one hour and twenty-five minutes, then the fastest time on record for a sailing ship, and it has not been beaten since I believe, except in one instance. The Flying Cloud, McKay's most celebrated ship, once made 374 knots or 433 miles in 24 hours and 25 minutes, equal to 17.17 miles an hour. - Providence in
